CFS 16/155 PRESENTATIONS

The following representatives were in attendance to speak to their submissions on the draft Community Rates Support policy.

Feilding Brass – Richard Kirby spoke in support of their submission, noting that their organisation currently receive a remission of 60% of service charges. The proposed draft policy would see an increase in rates payable by their organisation. He noted the proposal that applications be considered on a three yearly cycle, and asked whether an organisation that was unsuccessful in applying at that time could reapply the following year, rather than waiting another three years for consideration. He sought clarification on whether under the proposed policy the subcommittee would make the decision on funding or whether this decision would be delegated to staff.

Feilding Christian Leaders Network – representatives from member churches of the Feilding Christian Leaders Network were in attendance to speak to their submission. Eleanor Keyte-Bailey, of the Feilding Baptist Church, outlined the purpose of their group and noted how their submission outlined the types of work their groups do and how this work meets the Council’s vision. David Quinn, of Activate Church, spoke about some of the work undertaken by the churches in the community. He noted that most social welfare work in New Zealand was done by the churches and when churches finances were restrained it impacted on the social services work they can do in the community. Wayne Jelyman of the Salvation Army talked about the costs of providing the services that they do, giving examples of the services they provide to the community, the number of volunteer hours involved and the level of costs met by the church to provide those services. Robert Heath, of the Feilding Oroua Presbyterian Church noted that all of the organisations making submissions rely on volunteers. If their members were diverted into fundraising that impacts the amount of time that could be devoted to community outreach. In conclusion Kevin Barron emphasised their involvement in the community on a daily basis helping to make the community a vibrant place. Support from Council in this was essential and asked that Council consider reducing their rates cost so they were empowered to do more in the community and partner with Council to achieve their outcomes.

The Chairperson thanked submitters for their attendance.

The meeting adjourned for a tea break at 10.11am and reconvened at 10.20am.
